WATCH FOR WORK ON LOCAL ROADS

State Expected to Complete Highway between Gettysburg and New Oxford this Spring. Other Road Work Mapped out for this Year.

With the opening of spring, interest turns to the proposed road work in the county and the activities of the State Highway Department in this section will be watched with much interest.

Last year the work of rebuilding the road between Gettysburg and New Oxford was started. About two miles were constructed at the New Oxford end and about 2000 feet at this end. Grading and the placing of culverts were carried on over the ten miles of old turnpike, but the road, where it has not been rebuilt, is in a deplorable state and unfit for satisfactory travel. The big Alco truck which passed through Gettysburg Wednesday stalled three times between the two towns on account of the condition of the road. It is probable that the work at finishing this road will be the first taken up this spring.

State Highway Commissioner Bigelow announced a year or more ago that the road from Gettysburg to Harrisburg would be one of the first ones rebuilt under the highway act and that he hoped to have it in fine condition before the fiftieth anniversary. So far nothing but removing bumpers and some grading has been accomplished, and tourists covering that route this year will have to be satisfied with the ordinary dirt road.

Similar work of grading and removing rough places has been done on other roads taken under the Sproul act and much good in that line was done last year but, as yet, none of the fine macadam roads has made its appearance in Adams County.

Interest in taking over the turnpike between Gettysburg and Chambersburg has been aroused here but the company still holds the road. It is stated on good authority that a price has been agreed upon for the pike but it has not yet been acquired by the state. It will be recalled that the discovery that the turnpike company owned several Gettysburg streets was the thing that halted the movement toward street paving in this town last year. The acquisition by the state of this Chambersburg-Gettysburg road will be followed, it is believed, by the state immediately turning over to the town its own streets and then the council can go ahead—so far as that matter is concerned—with giving the town paved streets.

WATER PLANT FOR UPPER END TOWN

Gravity Water System now being Installed at Aspers. Fine Water from Three Strong Springs. For Home and Fire Use.

Aspers, one of the progressive towns in the upper end of the county, is now witnessing the installation of a modern gravity water system which will supply it with water for domestic use and ample fire protection. The village, located at Bendersville Station, is one of the busiest and most thriving of the many similar communities in the county and this new improvement is in line with its general spirit of advancement.

The water is to be brought from three strong springs on the Harris Cook farm, about a mile and a quarter north of Aspers, and work at the construction of a reservoir on this same farm has been started. The water is of fine quality and excellent flow.

Work at digging the ditches for the mains has been prosecuted vigorously under the direction of H. C. Gulden, H. A. Naylor and H. S. Rex, and it is believed that the entire system will be in operation within the next sixty days. There is a fall from the reservoir to the town of about 157 feet, ample for all fire purposes without artificial force.

A company has been formed to install the plant and a charter has been applied for. C. I. Blair is the president; D. C. Asper, the secretary, and Elmer H. Miller the treasurer. The capital is $7000.

Practically every one in the town is preparing to have the water placed in their properties and the entire community will be supplied upon completion of the work. Then the organization of a fire department will be the next thing.

MILITARY HONORS FOR SLAIN KING

Body of Greek Monarch Taken to the Palace.

CARRIED ON A STRETCHER

Procession Passed Spot Where Ruler Was Shot Down By Lurking Assassin.

Salonika, Turkey, March 20. — The body of King George of Greece was embalmed and removed from the hospital to the palace on a stretcher borne by his son, Prince Nicholas, and several superior officers of the Greek army.

The stretcher was followed by a strangely diversified procession, consisting of regular troops in their campaign outfit, officers in brilliant uniforms, clergy, civilians, Cretans, Musulmans, Greeks and people of the various Balkan races in a kaleidoscopic variety of costumes.

Soldiers of the Greek light infantry, in their quaint kilts surrounded the humble military stretcher as a guard of honor. The procession on its way to the palace passed the spot where King George was shot down.

On arrival at the palace, military honors were given. The body was placed on a bier in the main chamber and the Greek metropolis offered prayer. As the civil and military authorities filed past many of them burst into tears. A guard of honor, consisting of Greek captains and priests, the latter continually chanting prayers, will be stationed around the body until it is removed for burial.

Queen Olga, who is now on her way to Salonika, fainted in Athens when told of the assassination.

Aleksa Schinas, who murdered King George I. of Greece, appears to have lived much abroad. He returned to Salonika only when it was occupied by the Greek army after the surrender of the Turkish garrison.

The premeditation of the regicide appears to be established by the fact that Schinas lurked in hiding. He rushed out when his royal victim was only six feet from his hiding place and fired point blank into the back of the king. The shooting occurred only a few yards from police headquarters.

Lieutenant Colonel Francoudis, the king's aide-de-camp, was walking beside his royal master, and immediately drew his revolver. Schinas turned and fired at the aide-de-camp, but the shot went wild. Two Cretan military policemen who were acting as an escort to the king dashed at Schinas and plinked his arms before he could fire again.

When Francoudis saw that the assassin had been arrested he turned to King George, who he supposed had escaped unscathed, and was horrified to find his majesty stretched on the roadway.

Francoudis raised the stricken monarch's head from the pavement, but the king was already unconscious and he never spoke again.

Soldiers who had been summoned by the shots lifted the king from the ground and carried him to a hospital. He expired on the way without recovering consciousness.

When questioned by the police, Schinas truculently replied: "You have courts. I will speak there." Pressed to say who he was and what was the motive of his crime, he replied: "Take me to the police station so that the crowd shall not maltreat me. I will speak there."

On reaching the police station he gave his name and a few particulars about himself.

Since his triumphal entry into Salonika the king had been accustomed to take an afternoon walk, either to the famous White Tower or to the cavalry barracks.

The king's confidence in the people was so great that he went about freely, attended by a single equerry. The dangers of this habit were apparent to his entourage, who repeatedly but without avail requested his majesty to permit the presence of civil guards.

A few days ago four gendarmes were ordered to follow the king, but their presence was considered so objectionable by his majesty and so out of keeping with that attention which he felt for his subjects, old and new, that the number was reduced to two, who followed at a long distance.

With Colonel Francoudis, he was returning after a walk to the White Tower. He was in a happy, contented mood, and as he walked along he talked of the war, of the success of the Greek arms, of the capture of Janina and Salonika, and of this fitting climax to his fifty years' reign.

Prince Nicholas, the king's third son, and other officers hurried to the hospital. Arriving first, Prince Nicholas summoned the officers and, speaking in a voice that was choked with sobs, said:

"It is my deep grief to have to announce to you the death of our beloved king, and to invite you to swear fidelity to your new sovereign, King Constantine."

The officers responded by shouting: "Long live the king!"

FAMOUS CHIEF OF PARIS POLICE QUILTS

Served 20 Years and is Known Everywhere.

Paris, March 20.—Louis Lepine, the head of the Paris police for twenty years, resigned office.

He has been often called "the most famous chief of police in the world," and has figured in hundreds of celebrated cases. His name has been made almost a household word through its use by novelists and dramatists.

Lepine is sixty-seven years old, a veteran of the Franco-German war and a former governor of Algeria.

Contrary to the generally accepted principle that criminals can best be kept under surveillance and apprehended by secret methods, Lepine went on the theory that publicity in hunting them down was an essential factor.

He was without fear in the performance of his duties, a hard worker and confessed to a particular liking for conning the usually dry facts contained in police reports.

He knew the character of his countrymen thoroughly, and whenever he was in Paris, excited by political or other causes and reinforced by the anarchistic dream of the capital, engaged in pitched battles with the police. M. Lepine was in the forefront with his men—a picturesque little figure in citizens dress, with his gray goatee and an umbrella—his only means of defense.

Several times he escaped death by a narrow margin, but such is the Gallic temperament that he was a hero with the very classes who opposed law and order.

Virtually every monarch or head of a state in Europe knew M. Lepine personally, for he was present at their arrivals and departures from the French capital and he took sole responsibility for their safety during their sojourn in Paris.

TURKS WIN 24-HOUR FIGHT

Sultan's Forces Victorious in Battle Along the Tchatalja Lines.

Constantinople, Turkey, March 20.—A victory is claimed officially for the Turkish forces in a twenty-four-hour battle along the Tchatalja lines defending the city.

The Ottoman troops took the offensive, opening the attack by an advance of their right wing, which proceeded as far as Sivasse, Kalitaki and Akalan. Large forces of Bulgarians were encountered at those three places, and fierce fighting soon spread along the whole front. The Turkish troops drove the Bulgarians from their trenches and took possession.

The Turkish center then advanced and stormed the heights in their front, from which they routed the Bulgarians at the point of the bayonet. Other columns of Turkish troops captured several heights held by the Bulgarians to the south of the Turkish lines.

The battle raged until after sunset, terminating, it is declared, in a complete victory for the Turks. The commanders declare that the losses of both armies were heavy.

Another Zeppelin Wrecked.
Karlsruhe, March 20.—The Zeppelin 14, the latest military airship to be built, which was accepted by the German government only a week ago, was completely wrecked here while its crew was attempting to make a landing in a terrific windstorm.

Charles W. Elliot is 78.
Cambridge, Mass., March 20.—Charles W. Elliot, retired emeritus of Harvard, is celebrating his seventy-eighth birthday today. Relatives and members of the faculty paid their respects to Dr. Elliot.

POLICEMAN SHOT BY COWBOY CRANK

Demand $100 in Buffalo City Hall.

THREW PLAGE INTO PANIC

After Wounding an Officer, Big Bad Man From Montana Is Overpowered.

Buffalo, N. Y., March 20.—Joseph Stefanski, a cowboy from Geyser, Mont., apparently demented, threw the city hall into a panic when he entered the mayor's office and opened fire on the clerks and a policeman on duty there with a revolver.

Charles E. Lang, a policeman, who grappled with the man, was shot four times, but he will probably recover.

Stefanski called twice at the office in the morning asking for Mayor Fuhrmann or his secretary. In the afternoon he called for the third time. Addressing Charles Egloff, the license clerk, he asked for the mayor. Egloff told him the mayor was out.

"Well, I want $100," said Stefanski. Egloff tried to parley with the man while Lang, who had overheard the demand for money, walked toward him.

The sight of the officer apparently alarmed Stefanski, who stepped back and drew a revolver, yelling:

"I'll get that hundred or know the reason why."

Lang closed with Stefanski, but he was unable to seize the revolver. Stefanski fired five shots, four of which lodged in Lang's neck and shoulder. The fifth, aimed at Egloff, went wild.

Stefanski shook off his wounded antagonist and began to reload his revolver. While a deputy sheriff stood at one door of the mayor's office firing a revolver in Stefanski's direction, Detective Sergeant Herman Burkhardt rushed in and overpowered the man.

At police headquarters Stefanski declared that he was an anarchist and had gone to the city hall to "shoot 'em all."

In his pocket was a curiously worded document, which the police regard as further evidence of the man's unbalanced mind. It was written on the stationery of a Great Falls, Mont., bank, and purported to be an order for $100. Stamped upon it in several places were the words "Joseph Stefanski, cow puncher," after which was written in ink, "Big Rich Man."

Stefanski said he was a native of Poland and before coming here had worked in Geyser, Mont., and Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

TAFT WANTS T. R.'S PICTURE

Asks That White House Painting Be Sent Him.

Washington, March 20. — Former President Taft has mislaid one personal belonging which he left when he quit the White House—a picture of Theodore Roosevelt, which hung on the east wall of his private office.

Several days before he started for Augusta the president took down the only other picture in his sanctum, that of his father, Alphonso Taft, but the Roosevelt picture has been hanging there alone since President Wilson assumed office.

Wednesday a letter came to the White House offices requesting that the picture be taken down and sent to the New Haven hotel, where Mr. Taft expects to live for several months after he takes up his duties as a Yale professor.

MAY GIVE POST TO HARVEY

Friends Seek to Reconcile the President and the Colonel.

Washington, March 20. — There is good reason to believe that President Wilson may offer Colonel George Harvey an important diplomatic post—possibly that at London.

The name of Colonel Harvey is before the president, and friends of both men have been working to bring about a reconciliation between them that will inspire the president to prefer to Colonel Harvey an appointment. It is said that an invitation will be sent to Colonel Harvey by the president within a few days to visit the White House.

Knocked Out by Wild Pitch.
Hot Springs, Ark., March 20.—Bobby Byrne, Pittsburgh's third baseman was hit on the head and rendered unconscious by one of Joe Wood's fast shots in the third inning of the game between the Pittsburgh Nationals and the Boston Americans. He was placed in an automobile and driven to St. Joseph's Infirmary.

England Has Best Aeroplane.
London, March 20. — The British army has secretly perfected a type of aeroplane far superior to that used by other nations. This announcement was made in the house of commons by Colonel John Seely, secretary of state for war. It caused a great sensation.

Dow Gets Twelve Years.
Boston, March 20.—Stephen R. Dow recently convicted of the conversion of funds of four mining companies of which he was president, was sentenced to a term of eight to twelve years in state prison.

FOOLED THE OFFICIAL

Clever Trick a Daring Dacoit Played Upon an Englishman.

It was years ago in Burma. The English government was having trouble with a certain princely recalcitrant named Bob Toh. "The most daring and enterprising of the Dacoits." A heavy price had been set upon the rebel's head, but still Bob Toh was cunningly elusive.

At last, hard pressed, Bob Toh tried a new tack. He walked straight into the office of the commissioner.

"I am Bob Toh," he said simply. "I have come to surrender."

Exactly what he had counted on now happened. Fourteen years' experience with eastern subtlety and intrigue had taught the commissioner to be wary.

"Thank you," he said. "We will now proceed to discover who you really are and what you really want. Tell me, what do you expect to get out of this?"

"Ten thousand rupees," said the Bob quietly.

The commissioner, although a cool man, was a little staggered. "I don't quite follow," he murmured.

"Yet it's quite simple," whispered the Bob. "The government promises 10,000 rupees to the man who brings you the head of Bob Toh. I give it to you."

"Capital," was the wary answer. "But as you lose your head what good does the money do you?"

"My wife and children get the money."

"Pretty good, my man, but not quite good enough. Ten thousand rupees will be nothing to Bob Toh."

"If it were not I should not be here. I have been deserted and robbed. I am sure to be captured. My family might as well have the money while I can still command it."

"But why shouldn't I keep the money? I hand your head over, you know."

"Because you are an English gentleman. I chose my man, you see."

The commissioner mused awhile. Then he broke silence. "Look here, I know you are not the Bob. That is quite clear. I don't care who you are. But tell me frankly what you want."

The Burman hesitated awhile. Then he said: "You are right. But my life is worth as little as the Bob's. I have betrayed him and robbed him. He has sworn revenge. Give me an escort as far as Mandalay. Here, take these notes for 1,000 rupees—he had hid them on the table—and keep them if in twelve days' time I do not tell you how and when you can capture the Bob. Keep them till the Bob is caught if you prefer."

The commissioner thought hard and in silence for quite two minutes.

"I agree," he said at length.

So the Bob was safely escorted to Mandalay. Later the commissioner received a letter from him.

"You may keep those rupees," it ran, "which I, Bob Toh, left with you twelve days ago. I told you the truth. You would not believe me. The English government likes truth, and it likes money, but they never want both. I think, at the same time."—Youth's Companion.

The Most Crowded Street.

The supreme sensation of New York's east side is the sensation of the astounding populosity. The most populous street in the world—Hixson street—is a sight not to be forgotten. Compared to this, an uptown thoroughfare of crowded middle class flats in the open country is an unimpressive desert! The architecture seemed to sweat humanity at every window and door. The roadways were often impassable. The thought of the hidden interiors was terrifying. Indeed, the hidden interiors would not bear thinking about. The fancy shunned them—a problem not to be settled by sudden municipal edicts, but only by the efflux of generations.—Harper's Magazine.

Unsupervised.

"Darling," said the fond youth, producing a ring, "which is the right one?"

"For goodness sake, Algy?" responded the maiden. "Don't you know? Nineteen years old and never been engaged to a girl before?"—Chicago Tribune.

U. S. WILL RECOGNIZE CHINESE REPUBLIC

Result of Reputation by Wilson of Loan Project.

Washington, March 20.—Recognition of the Chinese republic at an early date will be the practical result of the reputation by President Wilson of the power loan project.

The withdrawal of the United States from participation in the loan negotiations is regarded by those responsible for the overthrow of the Knox policy as removing the chief obstacle which has prevented the recognition of China by the United States.

While the United States has not been actually prohibited from taking this action in favor of the Chinese republic at any time within the last eighteen months, to have done so would have been in violation of the spirit if not the letter of the agreement among the powers.

There is a question about the friendly disposition of the American people toward the new government in China, and President Wilson in his statement of reputation has reflected this popular sympathy with the Chinese.

He also is convinced that traditional principles of the United States and its long standing intimate relations with China require this government to manifest its kindly feelings by the practical act of recognition of the new republic.

Woman Causes Man's Arrest For Crime After Fifteen Years.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., March 20.—The county authorities believe that in the arrest of John Zanchowski, who was arrested at Denver, Colo., they have captured a murderer who has been a fugitive for the past fifteen years.

On Oct. 15, 1895, Steve Gulgi was murdered in a drunken brawl at Du Pont. His head was crushed in by a poker which he has been wielding by John Kremchick.

Following the crime Kremchick fled and a corner's jury indicted him from that time forth Mrs. Gulgi has relentlessly followed the trail of Kremchick.

Recently, she alleges, she discovered that John Zanchowski was none other than John Kremchick, and when she convinced herself that she was right she asked the county authorities to arrest him for the murder of her husband. Zanchowski was arrested at Denver and will be brought to Wilkes-Barre for trial.

TENER MAKES PEACE OFFER

Holds Out Olive Branch to the House.

WILLING TO AID PROBERS

Invitation to Committee Investigating Dual Office Holding to Confer With Him Is Accepted.

Harrisburg, Pa., March 20.—Governor Tener held out the olive branch to the house of representatives in the controversy which has arisen over the right of the special committee investigating dual office-holding in executive departments to subpoena the at-taches, and the house accepted it after a lengthy debate.

The report of the judiciary general committee, which upheld the right of the house to compel the attendance of witnesses and held the recalcitrants to be in contempt, was subsequently adopted.

Nothing will be done until the committee on investigation sees the governor at his invitation and reports back to the house.

The discussion was the most remarkable that has occurred among the many at this session, and Speaker After left the chair to urge that the house take steps to avoid a continuance of the dispute and a possible lawsuit to determine the rights of the executive and legislative branches.

The governor sent a message to the house at the opening of the session, in which he set forth his attitude and said that if the committee of investigation would call upon him he would endeavor to furnish information, and if it was not satisfied he would not interpose any objection to service and acceptance of subpoenas. This message was read, and Mr. Shern, of Philadelphia, at once moved that the committee be instructed to wait upon the governor.

The house after debate, adopted by 125 to 72 a resolution for the Gelsert probing committee to wait on Governor Tener according to his invitation to discuss the dual office-holding controversy.

The committee on judiciary general had prepared a report on the subject after hearing from its sub-committee which it had been expected would be presented, and Samuel B. Scott, of Philadelphia, demanded it be taken up at once.

Mr. Shern stood on his motion and declared that the house should not "play possum politics." Mr. Scott moved to lay Shern's motion on the table, but Mr. Kitts objected, saying the governor had come forward in a manly way and was entitled to consideration. J. R. K. Scott, of Philadelphia, asked for action on the report of the committee.

The objection to the Shern motion was denounced by Mr. Schuck, West moreland, as "buncombe." Mr. Allen of Allegheny, declared that no effort should be made to stifle the consideration of the main issue, which was the right of the house to make an inquiry.

This was denied by Mr. Shern, and when Mr. Rockwell, chairman of the judiciary general committee, attempted to put in the report he was halted by objection from Mr. Cox, of Philadelphia.

Following the adoption of Mr. Shern's motion, the report of the judiciary general committee was read.

The report, which was in substance that those who refused to obey the subpoenas were in contempt of the house, was unanimously adopted. The report declared in contempt the following state employees:

Walter H. Galtier, secretary to the governor; George D. Thorn, chief clerk in the office of the secretary of the commonwealth; George Kendell Hart and John H. Whitmore, clerks in the same office; H. D. Jones, state treasurer official; James Craig, deputy secretary of internal affairs; Cassius A. Donn, executive department; Samuel P. Todd, executive controller; Harry S. McDevitt, assistant executive controller; E. B. Eisenhart, department of internal affairs; James M. Robbin, adjutant general's department and E. T. Oswald, head carpenter in the department of public grounds and buildings.

There are 37,945 Roman Catholic priests, three cardinals, eleven active archbishops, three titular archbishops, 101 bishops, two archbishops and fifteen abbots in the United States.

Two American girls stopping in Munich one morning asked their landlady what there was in the way of sights in the country round about. They had "done" the city, and it only remained for them to take in anything remarkable in the environs.

"The Wohlfarth schloss is a very old building," the woman replied. "It is not far from here. You will find it very interesting."

"Is it a ruin?"

"Oh, no! It is occupied by the Wohlfarths."

"Good!" said one of the girls. "Well go. I'm tired of ruins and pictures of saints and martyrs being roasted on griddles. Let's go, Belle."

"I'm with you, Rosie. I would like to see a real old castle that's kept up in modern style."

Alighting at a railway station, they asked the way to the castle of an official who showed them the towers rising above the trees within walking distance. He informed them that Count Wolfgang Wohlfarth occupied the castle and sometimes tourists were admitted to inspect it. On reaching it they crossed a drawbridge, passed under a portcullis and told the gate-keeper in German, which they spoke tolerably well, that they were American tourists and would like to see the castle.

"Ich w-w-w-e!"

"Can you tell us to whom to apply?" asked Belle.

"H-h-h-h!"

The man broke down again. "I suppose he fell to stammering by trying to pronounce his master's name, Wolfgang Wohlfarth. How would you like to be Countess Wolfgang Wohlfarth, Belle?"

"I'd rather be the countess without the Wolfgang Wohlfarth."

Both girls laughed, and just then a man came toward them in clothes that they supposed were livery. He bowed politely to the girls and waited for them to speak. They told him that they would be obliged if he would go to the count and get permission for them to see the castle. At the same time Belle put a silver coin in his hand. He put it in his pocket, replying that he had authority to show the castle to visitors and would be happy to do so in their case.

He seemed to be well versed in the history of the castle, showing them apartments the Emperor Charles V. and other notables had occupied, a tower that had been battered down and repaired in a war with the king of Sweden and no end of arms that had been taken in battle by the Wohlfarths of olden times. Indeed, for a lucky he seemed remarkably familiar with the history of Europe during a period that few Americans are not interested in. The girls, however, had been sufficiently educated to recognize the fact that the man made no historical blunders—at least none that they could detect. When they had finished the tour of the different objects of interest and they were about to depart Belle thanked the man and said:

"Please tell your master that we have been very much pleased with his castle. We are from Milwaukee, in the United States. If he ever comes to America I shall be happy to show him my father's home."

"Milwaukee?" exclaimed the man.

"Yes, we have a great many Germans in our city."

The man changed the language he used from German to fair English and said that the count had relatives living in Milwaukee. If the visitors would wait for a few moments he would like to ask the count if he would not wish to meet them. They assented, and he ushered them into a waiting room. Presently he returned with an invitation from the count to remain to lunch, then turned them over to a maid.

When the visitors entered the drawing room they were received by an elderly lady who welcomed them graciously, though she did not speak English, and the girls' German was not readily understood by her nor hers by them. While they were chatting together came the man who had shown them about the castle. He had doffed his livery, which was really a hunting costume, and appeared in the everyday dress of a gentleman.

"This is my son, Wolfgang," said the lady who had received them.

"A! This is my mother, the Countess Wohlfarth," replied the young man. "She has a cousin living in Milwaukee, and therefore I presumed she would like to meet one coming from the same city."

"You are Count Wolfgang!"

The count smiled and begged her not to attempt so diffident a vocal feat as to pronounce his name. He then told the girls that he was about starting out to shoot in his preserves when he saw them and could not refrain from humorizing their mistake in mistaking him in hunting costume for one of the servants. Then all went to luncheon.

The girls were invited by the dowager countess to make a visit at the castle, which lasted a week. The next year the count appeared in Milwaukee ostensibly to visit his cousin, but really to propose marriage to the girl who said that she would prefer being countess without the Wolfgang Wohlfarth. But thus far have failed.

SERVIA AS A NATION.

It Originated in the First Half of the Seventh Century.

The birth of Servia as a nation, acted in or near its present home, may be dated in the first half of the seventh century. About 600 A. D., when the Avaric empire of desolation was established on the Danube, two tribes, the Croats and the Serbs, retiring before the ravages of the Tartar horsemen, settled in the countries now known as Croatia, Bosnia and Servia.

They were Slavs, but the Croats perhaps had, like the Slavs of Moesia in after years, adopted the name of a Tartar tribe. Both, fleeing from the Avars, were naturally hostile to them, and it is possible that they settled in the empire with the consent or even at the invitation of the Emperor Heraclius I. At any rate, they appear to have been considered as vassals of the empire. Their first settlements lay rather westward of the country now called Servia, the Drave, the present western boundary, being the dividing line between Bulgar and Serb in the eighth century. Here the Serbs dwelt more or less uneventfully for three centuries. They generally formed a loose confederacy under chiefs called zupans. They were commonly, in a loose fashion, loyal to the eastern empire mainly through fear of their dangerous neighbors, the Bulgarians. About 840 they united under a chief named Vlastimir to repel the latter.

The country rose to great heights under Stephen Dushan, the czar of the Serbs, but after his death Murad I. conquered the country, and it was not until 1815 that the Serbs partially threw off the Turkish yoke.—Exchange.

Flocks of quail and prairie chickens that may have sought a refuge for the winter on your premises should be helped, if feed is scarce, by having occasional handfuls of grain thrown to them. With proper treatment they will become tame, and in a number of instances they have been known to come into the barnyard or feed lots to pick up scattering grain and feed. The two species of birds mentioned are among the most valuable of insect destroyers, and simply from the standpoint of self interest the level headed farmer should give them a lift through the winter season.

COMING BIRTHDAY

Dr. Z. A. Colestock, Well Known Here, Has Had Interesting Career.

The Rev. Dr. Z. A. Colestock, superintendent of the Old People's home, Mechanicsburg, well known among members of the United Brethren church, will celebrate his nineteenth birthday anniversary next Tuesday.

Dr. Colestock was born in Littlestown, in 1823 and in that town he spent his younger years. He was religiously inclined from his youth and was converted and joined the United Brethren in Christ when quite young, subsequently was licensed to preach, being then a resident of Ohio. As one of the pioneer ministers of the church he traveled extensively, having many appointments, some of them widely separated from each other, and he experienced and underwent the hardships common to the itinerant ministers of those days.

In 1846 he began his labors in the East and for many years thereafter served various charges within the bounds of the Pennsylvania conference. He also filled the office of presiding elder and was frequently elected as one of the delegates to represent his conference in the legislative body of the church.

For some years past Dr. Colestock was superintendent of the Old People's home at Mechanicsburg, and although he did not have a regular charge he preached often within the bounds of his conference, and notwithstanding the fact that the weight of years is upon him, still preaches with the clearness, force and logic that characterized his efforts when in the full vigor of his manhood.

CONVICTS IN ROAD BUILDING

Why Their Use Is Becoming Nation Wide In Scope.

BOTH SIDES ARE BENEFITED

The Men Themselves Take Pride In Their Work and Are Kept Strong and Well—The State Has Less Expense and Better Highways.

The use of convicts on the public roads has passed through the period of hysterical wrangle into a period of actually successful accomplishment and almost universal acceptance. Articles galore have been written, pictures of the convict road gang intrude themselves upon the public from the pages of our current journals, while the "movies" take our children in among the convicts at work upon the roads all teach us that under a zebra-like exterior there is the human being—the same as ourselves.

What lies behind the demand for the work of convicts upon the roads? Is it the demand for cheap labor on the part of the road builders? Is it the demand for cheap road construction on the part of property owners? Is it the demand for a new type of convict labor in an unorganized industry free from competition? Is it the desire of some prison warden or state official to get public acclaim? While human nature is as it is there is likelihood that motives such as these will lead some men to seek to exploit the convict. Still it is the hope of the new school of penologists that these anti-social instincts will be curbed by law and social usage and by the severe hand of the penal system itself. Exploitation from whatever source must not be the reason for the development of the work of convicts upon the roads.

The underlying motive in convict road building must be to secure the greatest efficiency for the state out of its possession. The convict is the property of the state. The road is the property of the state or of its subdivisions. The working of the convict upon the roads brings together two elements similar in their possession, thereby eliminating many elements of waste in their joint operation.

Road labor is fairly well paid, is of a roving type picked up in the neighborhood and possesses the ruggedness and endurance which mean hardship, yet a healthy vigor and manhood which often attract the growing spirit of youth when an outlet is sought for the surplus energies and wayward tendencies. The road camp is democracy. The man's a man for a that. Give and take, respect the cook, keep clean if possible, and devil take the hindmost. Many convicts need just such experience. It would be foolish to put others on the road gang. The men must be selected because of their need of just such experience. The victim of vandalism had better be kept within the prison walls.

Federal aid will encourage state road building. Our national roads will be but few, our state roads should be many. The state road superintendent should work together with the state prison authorities on the convict situation and both the county road work and the county convict should be under their supervision. The picture I have drawn as convicts' camps at their best must not be taken for a description of the caricature which is found in some of the states. It is fallacious to waste the possibilities of convict labor as they are being wasted in some places.

Severity of discipline in things penal has been confused with slackness of business management, while the application of scientific methods based upon the psychology of the individual has been confused with sentimental emotionalism. Improve the convict camp place it on the right basis, and the result will be that the magistrates will commit many men whom they today release for fear of condemning them to cruel and unusual punishment. How much better to put these guilty men on the roads gangs than to send out police to gather the crashshooters from the byways and hedges. The new industrial penology claims to be humane, but because it is humane it is a hard headed materialistic proposition whereby more guilty men will be punished and their punishment profit them and the state the more.
